Biographical Sketch

Born in Montréal, Québec in 1918, the daughter of Marie-Anne Rita Forest and J.B. Parent, Madeleine Parent received her early education in French at the L'Académie St. Urbain, the Villa-Maria Convent and in English at the Trafalgar School for Girls. She then attended McGill University, graduating with a B.A. in 1940. During her McGill years, she took part in her first collective action through the Canadian Students Assembly (CSA) campaign to seek financial aid for needy students. She also met Val Bjarnason, a student from British Columbia, at a CSA conference, and married him in 1941.

By 1942, she was the secretary of the Montreal Trades and Labour Council organizing committee. In 1943, she began working as a key union organizer, with Kent Rowley, for the United Textile Workers' Union of America (UTWA), in Québec. By 1946, 6000 textile workers, organized into a union by Rowley and Parent, engaged in a strike against Dominion Textile in Valleyfield and Montréal. These activities engendered a strong reaction from the provincial government of Maurice Duplessis against Parent, including arrests, legal proceedings for seditious conspiracy and charges that she was a communist.

In 1952, in the midst of another strike in Valleyfield, the international UTWA pushed Parent and Rowley out of the union. Afterwards, both Parent and Rowley eschewed the American international union movement in favour of Canadian-based unions. Madeleine Parent joined with Kent Rowley to found the Canadian Textile Council (CTC) in 1952 that later became the Canadian Textile and Chemical Union (CTCU). Rowley was the President of the union with Madeleine Parent as Secretary-Treasurer. In 1953 Parent married Rowley. In 1969, they became founding members of the Council of Canadian Unions that latter became the Confederation of Canadian Unions (CCU), in which Rowley served as Secretary-Treasurer until his death in 1978. Madeleine Parent's post-1967 union work was focused mainly in Ontario. She served as the Secretary-Treasurer of the CTCU, as well as the Eastern Vice-President of the CCU. The union activities also served as a vehicle for Parent's engagement in issues such as equal pay for equal work.

Retiring from union work in 1983 to Montréal, Madeleine Parent continued her social-activist role, focusing on women's rights. She became a founding member of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women (NAC) and has played an active role in addressing issues faced by immigrant and Aboriginal women.

Madeleine Parent's efforts in organizing workers and fighting for labour rights have made an indelible contribution to the Canadian labour movement. This, in addition to her work for social justice including women's rights, has been recognized through honorary degrees from several Canadian universities including her alma mater, McGill University.

Custodial History

These records were acquired directly from the home of Madeleine Parent and an office in McGill University.

Scope and Content

The fonds chiefly documents Madeleine Parent's activities as a key union organizer and activist in Québec and Ontario, for the United Textile Workers' Union of America (UTWA), 1943-1952 and Canadian Textile Council (CTC), as well as the Canadian Textile and Chemical Union (CTCU), 1952-1983, through union documents, including minutes, resolutions, collective agreements, financial documents, and correspondence, as well as newspaper clippings, union/labour newsletters, union convention badges and photographs. The records of union activities include handwritten transcripts of the testimony at her seditious conspiracy trial 1947-1948, pamphlets and broadsheets concerning strikes at Dominion Textile in 1952, and Harding Carpets in 1956 as well as a photo album of her trip to China, 1960. The records also reflect her activities in the Council of Canadian Unions as well as the Confederation of Canadian Unions (CCU) through records of executive board and congress activities, chiefly 1973-1983 and her notes concerning labour school training sessions, 1977-1981.

The fonds also documents Madeleine Parent's social and political activism, especially in the years following her retirement from the union in 1983, through correspondence, speeches and lectures, newspaper clippings, minutes, agenda books, 1948-2009, telephone journals, 1990-2005, photographs, as well as audiotapes of interviews and speeches. There are records concerning her involvement in public campaigns concerning such issues as free trade, 1987, de-indexing of family allowances, 1985-1986, freedom of choice/abortion rights, 1986-1987, Charlottetown Accord, 1992 and the human rights case of Mary Pitawanakwat, 1994-1995. Some of these campaigns reflect her involvement in the National Action Committee on the Status of Women.

Also included are documents pertaining to her personal life including family documents, correspondence, biographical information, photographs, and diplomas.

This fonds also contains personal and labour-related writings, including articles, letters to the editor, book reviews, reports on union activities, notes on Canadian history, and correspondence of Kent Rowley, 1942-1975.

Notice biographique

Fille de Marie-Anne Rita Forest et J.B. Parent, Madeleine Parent est née à Montréal (Québec) en 1918. Après avoir étudié en français à l'Académie St-Urbain et au Collège Villa Maria et en anglais à la Trafalgar School for Girls, elle s'inscrit à l'Université McGill, dont elle obtient un baccalauréat ès arts en 1940. C'est pendant ses études dans cet établissement qu'elle participe à sa première action collective dans le cadre de la campagne de l'Assemblée des étudiants canadiens (AEC), pour obtenir des bourses gratuites pour les enfants de familles ouvrières. Lors d'une conférence de l'AEC, elle rencontre l'étudiant vancouveris Val Bjarnason, qu'elle épouse en 1941.

Dès 1942, elle devient secrétaire du comité d'organisation du Conseil des métiers et du travail de Montréal. En 1943, aux côtés de Kent Rowley, elle joue un rôle clé dans la syndicalisation des Ouvriers unis du textile d'Amérique (OUTA) au Québec. En 1946, les 6 000 travailleurs du textile syndiqués par Rowley et Parent se mettent en grève contre Dominion Textile à Valleyfield et Montréal. Ces activités provoquent une forte réaction de la part du gouvernement provincial de Maurice Duplessis contre Madeleine Parent, y compris des arrestations, un procès pour conspiration séditieuse et une accusation de communisme.

En 1952, durant une autre grève à Valleyfield, le secrétariat général de l'OUTA expulse Parent et Rowley du syndicat. Par la suite, Parent et Rowley s'éloignent du mouvement syndical international d'origine américaine en faveur de syndicats canadiens. Madeleine Parent se joint à Kent Rowley en 1952 pour fonder le Conseil canadien du textile (CCT), qui va devenir le Syndicat canadien des travailleurs du textile et de la chimie (CTCU). Kent Rowley était alors président du syndicat tandis que Madeleine Parent en était la secrétaire-trésorière. En 1953, Madeleine Parent épouse Kent Rowley. En 1969, ils deviennent membres fondateurs du Conseil des syndicats canadiens, qui deviendra la Confédération des syndicats canadiens (CSC), dont Rowley est le secrétaire-trésorier jusqu'à son décès en 1978. L'activité syndicale de Madeleine Parent après 1967 se déroule surtout en Ontario. Elle est alors secrétaire-trésorière de la CTCU et vice-présidente de la CSC pour l'Est du Canada. Ses activités syndicales l'amènent à s'engager dans la lutte pour un salaire égal pour un travail égal.

Après sa retraite comme syndicaliste à Montréal à partir de 1983, Madeleine Parent poursuit son œuvre d'activiste pour les droits des femmes. Membre fondatrice du Comité canadien d'action sur le statut de la femme (CCA), elle s'intéresse de façon particulière aux droits des immigrantes et des femmes autochtones.

L'œuvre de Madeleine Parent pour la syndicalisation des travailleurs et la lutte pour leurs droits constitue un apport indélébile au mouvement syndical canadien. Plusieurs universités canadiennes, notamment son alma mater, l'Université McGill, ont reconnu le rôle Madeleine Parent dans le domaine syndical et ceux de la justice sociale et des droits de la femme, en lui conférant des doctorats honorifiques.

Historique de la conservation

Ces documents proviennent directement de la maison de Madeleine Parent, avenue Champagneur, à Outremont (Québec) et du bureau du professeur Jarrett Rudy, du Programme d'études sur le Québec et de l'Université McGill.

Portée et contenu

Ce fonds porte principalement sur les activités de l'importante organisatrice syndicale et activiste, Madeleine Parent, au Québec et en Ontario, pour les Ouvriers unis du textile d'Amérique (OUTA) (1943-1952) et le Conseil canadien du textile (CCT), ainsi que pour le Syndicat canadien des travailleurs du textile et de la chimie (CTCU) (1952-1983). Il comprend des documents syndicaux, notamment des procès-verbaux, des résolutions, des conventions collectives, des documents financiers et de la correspondance, en plus de coupures de journaux, bulletins d'informations syndicales, macarons de congrès syndical et photographies. Les documents portant sur les activités syndicales comprennent des transcriptions manuelles des témoignages présentés lors de son procès pour conspiration séditieuse en 1947-1948, des feuillets de propagande et des tracts publicitaires relatifs aux grèves de Dominion Textile en 1952 et de Harding Carpets en 1956, en plus d'un album de photographies de son voyage en Chine en 1960. Les documents reflètent également, mais à un degré beaucoup moindre, ses activités au sein du Conseil des syndicats canadiens, ainsi que de la Confédération des syndicats canadiens (CSC). Ces documents portent sur les activités des conseils syndicaux et des congrès, surtout pour 1973-1983, et sur ses notes concernant les sessions de formation scolaire en éducation ouvrière (1977-1981).

Ce fonds porte également sur l'activisme social et politique de Madeleine Parent, surtout dans les années qui ont suivi sa retraite du mouvement syndical en 1983. Il comprend de la correspondance, des discours et des conférences, des coupures de journaux, des procès-verbaux, des agendas (1948-2009), des journaux téléphoniques (1990-2005), des photographies et des bandes magnétiques audio d'entrevues et de discours. Il y a aussi des documents portant sur sa participation à des campagnes publiques sur des questions comme le libre-échange (1987), la désindexation des allocations familiales (1985-1986), le droit au libre choix/à l'avortement (1986-1987), l'Accord de Charlottetown (1992) et l'affaire de droits humains Mary Pitawanakwat (1994-1995). Certaines de ces campagnes reflètent son implication dans le Comité canadien d'action sur le statut de la femme.

Sont également inclus des documents concernant sa vie personnelle comme des papiers de famille, de la correspondance, des renseignements biographiques, des photographies et des diplômes.

Ce fonds comprend enfin des écrits personnels sur le mouvement syndical, y compris des articles, des lettres au rédacteur, des critiques de livres, des comptes rendus d'activités syndicales, des notes sur l'histoire du Canada et la correspondance de Kent Rowley (1942-1975).
